

Abraham Lincoln: An Address Delivered Before the Mens League of the Broadway Tabernacle Church of New York, Feb; 10th, 1902 (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Abraham Lincoln: An Address Delivered Before the Mens League of the Broadway Tabernacle Church of New York, Feb; 10th, 1902 As the visitor leans upon the gallery balustrade of the National Library at Washington, that monument of beauty, that gift to their country of the best that is in American architecture and genius and art, he finds imprinted upon its walls words befitting the chaste splendor of their surroundings. And first across from his eye is this Hither repairing other stars in their golden urns draw light. A sentiment we may happily make our own whenever we come together once in the year upon the time named in our laws, and setting aside the care and the rush and the turmoil and the distraction of the life of the nation and of this, its teeming metropolis, may again draw hope and faith and inspiration and pride and light into the golden urns of our citizenship from that great star of the nations dark and troublesome and Homeric days, Abraham Lincoln.
