

S.I.C. Memorial

S.I.C. MEMORIAL A family can survive anything, if it can hang on through a hurricane, the founding of a surf religion, and a brain transplant. When a marine fungus fouls the air ducts of S.I.C. Memorial, Dr. Hubert Humperdinck, a surfing, goof-ball anesthesiologist, gets the blame. An oil sheik offers $200 million to rebuild the hospital, an offer matched by a Catholic charity. As Muslims battle Christians over naming rights, Hubert becomes a patient himself and must deal with a mad neurosurgeon, Mexican drug cartels, and his angry wife. More on S.I.C. MEMORIAL Hubert Humperdinck passes gas at Sarah Imogene Cunningham Memorial, a hospital in San Diego. Hubert does not like to work, except to earn enough money to take time off to hit the waves or write screenplays. His sons, Razor and Thor, surf circles around him. When they're not out in the water, they experiment with mice in his garage laboratory. Hubert's beautiful wife, Delilah, and a pair of geriatric golden retrievers, Darth and Penny, do their best to keep the three under control, but they pretty much fail. When a marine fungus-among-us contaminates the air ducts and patients of S.I.C. Memorial, Infectious Disease fingers Hubert as the source. A billionaire heart transplant patient--an Arab oil sheik--offers $200 million to build a new, uninfected hospital, the offer matched by a Catholic charity. As Muslims battle Christians over naming rights for the new center, a group of terrorists take the existing building--with its patients and physicians--hostage. Hubert, hospitalized with a fungal foot infection, battles to win over the minds of the brain-washed terrorists. He invents a new religion and succeeds in converting most. After a harrowing escape to the wilds of drug-ravaged Mexico, he returns to work on the remaining die-hards, but only an insane neurosurgeon and Hubert's dying dog, Darth, offer the faintest hope of a plan. As the California ocean heats to a record eighty degrees, Hubert finds himself caught in a web of hurricane weather, medicine gone mad, and the wrath of a legal system intent on imprisoning him for murder. Will he go to jail? Will Delilah dump him? Will his latest screenplay get made into a movie? Only a madman can survive these calamities. Dr. Humperdinck, amiable and whacked-out as he is, makes the grade. Hes certifiably nuts. And insanity is the only thing that can save him. REVIEWSA fast-paced, whimsical satire of the modern world. Vanstrum is a gifted comic writer, particularly adept at creating vivid scenes and managing realistic dialogue...Never a dull moment, and humor without cynicism. Everywhere the prose sparkles with innovation, quiet revelation, and penetrating social insight. The reader cares about the protagonist, and his demesne, and I think one of the most attractive qualities of the book is the continual sense of the unexpected, as well as of the many absurdities of the human condition.--John A. Murray, author of over 40 books, including Cinema Southwest and The Sierra Club Guide and The Sierra Club Nature Writing Handbook An hilarious romp through the mad world of Humperdinck.--Alexander Blake, author of In Fathers Way
