

East of San Diego - The Lost History of the East San Diego Police Department 1912-1923

The City of East San Diego sprang forth in 1912 with a population of 4,000, lured there by a land boom, dreams of prosperity, and prohibition. At the time of its incorporation into San Diego in 1923, its population had grown to 12,000. During East San Diego's eleven years as a city, its people, their dreams, and booze made a police force necessary. Gary E. Mitrovich's East of San Diego uncovers, for the first time, the lost history of the East San Diego Police Department, revealing a forgotten place and time in the history of San Diego, and its law enforcement. Through its inviting text and many vintage photographs, Mitrovich's book relates stories of bank robberies, assaults, and scandal. Its never-before-told history is education and exciting to San Diego residents, history-buffs, and law enforcement officials.
