

A Boy Called Graham: The Shocking Story of My Forgotten Childhood

Graham Gaskin's story is the kind of story that will touch the reader deeply. It is a story of suffering, neglect, and abuse on many levels. When Graham was only nine months old, his mother committed suicide by throwing herself from the Wallasey ferry. For most of his life he was passed from children's home, to foster family, to institution, often being mistreated by those in authority. As he came of age, Graham had nowhere to turn but to a life on the streets, eventually living by his wits around the world. This is the controversial story of a forgotten child who, through no fault of his own, was left to fight his own battles.
