

The Rainbow

Banned for its sexual content in 1915, The Rainbow is D.H. Lawrence's British tale of the three generations of the Brangwen family, and a story of power-over-passion. Tom Brangwen's love for Lydia explores the subtleties of relationship politics and power. Anna's love for William Brangwen examines religious traditions and questions whether women were made from a man's body, when every man is born of a woman. Ursula Brangwen, the third generation, is highly curious in her exploration of homosexuality and her feelings for her teacher Miss Winifred Inger. The Rainbow was so controversial a century ago that copies were burned and the book was banned from Britain for 11 years.
