

The Worlds Greatest Psychic: Based on the Life of David Marius Guardino

Who would pay $10,000 for psychic advice from a man sitting in a mental hospital awaiting trial for credit card fraud? Why, the rich and famous, of course! That's exactly what happened when seer David Marius Guardino was in his heyday, billing himself as The Worlds Greatest Psychic. David rose to prominence in the world of the occult in the 1980s. His signature claim to fame is the well documented seances that he held in Graceland Mansion, when he supposedly contacted the deceased King of Rock-n-Roll, Elvis Presley. For more than three decades, he hoodwinked celebrities, businesspeople and politicians into believing he could make others do their bidding. In reality, he was a business consultant with no apparent business sense. He freely gave out advice on building successful relationships, yet he married nine times. He claimed that his psychic powers were a gift from God, although he described himself as an atheistic existentialist and hedonist. Davids flamboyant Las Vegas lifestyle deeply embarrassed his loved ones. But his mother, co-author Harriet Smith Guardino, refused to give up on her eldest son. She led an intense spiritual battle on Davids behalf, which finally resulted in his salvation just before he died in prison for income tax evasion.
