

The Even Stranger Case of Dr. Ajay & Mr. Hotchandani

A modern day Dr. Jekyll & Mr. Hyde with 500mg of Humor, 27 mL of Genius, 9% Insanity and a dash of coriander, Dr. Ajay Hotchandani peeks into Pandoras Box as he and his alternate ego go looking for a wife. Posting two separate profiles on an Indian matrimonial website using two different sets of pictures, he contacts the same group of girls using both profiles and documents their responses. Are (Indian) women as superficial as men? Are they more superficial than men? Are mustaches bringing sexy back? With an unusual twist to it, the book also manages to shed some light on the plight most Indian girls face when they come of age and are pressured into getting married. The pressure to marry young, to marry within their own community/religion, to marry someone you dont love, and if time is running out, the pressure just to marry anyone willing to say yes!
